National District Attorneys Association issues statement on appointment of District Attorney Steve Marshall as Alabama AG

ARLINGTON, Virginia -- The National District Attorneys Association (NDAA) was pleased to learn that earlier today Alabama Governor Robert Bentley appointed Marshall County District Attorney Steve Marshall to be the next Attorney General for the state of Alabama. Marshall steps into that role after the Governor appointed Alabama Attorney General Luther Strange to serve the as the next Senator from the state in the United States Senate.

Throughout his time as a district attorney, Marshall participated in numerous national trainings and symposiums as a member of NDAA, and also served in several leadership capacities. Most recently, Marshall served on the association board as the Alabama State Director and as co-chair of the organization's legislative committee, charged with vetting legislative and policy proposals before Congress at the federal level.

NDAA is confident that Marshall will continue to be an asset to the state of Alabama in his new role and the organization thanks him for his years of service and dedication to the mission of NDAA as the leading voice for America's prosecutors.

The National District Attorneys Association (NDAA), www.ndaa.org, is the largest prosecutor organization in the country, representing 2,500 elected and appointed District Attorneys across the United States, as well as 40,000 Assistant District Attorneys.
