Keynote speaker

Massachusetts Attorney General Maura Healey

Maura Healey began serving as Massachusetts Attorney General in January 2015 and is leading the people's law firm, continuing a career spent fighting for justice and equal rights. Maura's historic victory in her first-ever run for office was driven by a strong grassroots campaign. For seven years prior to her election, Maura helped lead the Attorney General's Office where she began as Chief of the Civil Rights Division and ultimately oversaw more than half of the office's 500 employees. Earlier in her career, Maura was a prosecutor in Middlesex County and a litigation partner at WilmerHale, one of Boston's most prestigious law firms.

Maura is the oldest of five children and grew up in the small coastal community of Hampton Falls, N.H., just over the Massachusetts border. After graduating from high school, Maura left her small town to attend Harvard College, where she majored in government and was the captain of the basketball team. After two years as a starting point guard for a professional basketball team in Austria, Maura returned to Massachusetts to attend law school at Northeastern University.
